

Your History Moment - Here we see an early VW Rabbit doing the "fire hydrant" maneuver (think dog at a fire hydrant, got it?). This cornering attitude was typical of early front wheel drive cars with "beam" rear suspensions. This is one of the more extreme cases that I have seen. I don't recall the driver but this was around 1990 at an SCCNH Auto-X at Tenny Mountain Ski Area, above Plymouth. Note also that white shoe polish was used to make the car number.
